

If the FCC chooses to overturn / weaken the Indiana no-call list it will be doing a grave dis-service to the residents of the state of Indiana, and only serving the interests of businesses who use the most invasive methods of contacting "customers".

You should allow the states the right to determine how companies are allowed to interact with the citizens of that state, after all we elected the officials who passed the law into being. We did not elect you... and as such you have no accountability to us.

If the people in Indiana are sufficiently upset by the no-call list law, let them get rid of it by starting a referendum and voting it off the books, do not do away with the law at the whim of a collection of politicians who live nearly 1,000 miles away, and have no vested interest in what goes on in our state.
